The plan for the year ahead is to release a new version of Photoshop that is more focused on web usage and acceleration. The plan is to retire the previous version as soon as practically possible, as we want to save as much time as possible moving forward. By focusing our resources on this big update, we will also be able to spend more time thinking about new features that make work easier or more productive. This is also what sparked our interest in the new Web Graphics Workflow Toolkit from Microsoft — we are very excited and pleased to see Microsoft pushing native web-native APIs and better web performance — and this is the same approach we want to take with Photoshop moving forward. The new Photoshop will look towards the future and enable us to focus our full attention on our own native Web Graphics Workflow Toolkit, in which we have been working on and experimenting with for more than six months now. It is an exciting time for us to be in the process of designing and building a new Photoshop, and the new and upcoming versions of Substance along with HTML and CSS will be part of the Photoshop led future. Now that Photoshop for the web is on a path to be deprecated, we are also deprecating some of the legacy legacy features that weren't chosen as the priority for the future as the native GPU-based Photoshop tools have been gaining adoption. If you need to transform your images into the psychedelic world of the 1960s, you can now easily get your hands on a new-generation motion trainer for Apple devices. Simply open the application and let it blow your mind. Adobe Photoshop has always been known for great and fast loading speed. That has not changed with the latest update from Adobe. Photoshop CS6 gets faster than previous versions as it doesn't use using external plugins. It uses the native GPU used by all the Intel-based Macs, not just the one used by the old Mac Pro. It uses multithreaded rendering and vector graphics on the new Mac Pro models, and Adobe is now supporting 8K images natively including for both raw and in-camera JPEG/DNG files. In fact, you can also make a higher-quality viewing experience on a standard monitor or cinema projector by reducing the resolution of the final image to 8K. Adobe graphics products continue to feature a greater emphasis on visual effects. With the release of Photoshop CC 2016, the latest version of Adobe's flagship creative software, you can now get huge retouching and compositing effects that you may have only dreamed of.
